Oplum growing is a sort of garde cultivation, the poppy plants being grown in little squares or beds intesected by tiny water channels for irri gation wherever this is possible. The growth of the plants is carefully teaded, and at length the time comes when they burst out into flower, and the white petals of the flowern glisten in the morning dew.

These beautiful petals are the first produce of the crop, for the women and children of the cultivators' families come forth and pick them off one by one and carefully dry them, so that they may serve afterward as the covering of the manufactured cakes of opium. Then the popples, with their bare capsule heads, remain standing is the open field until it is considered that they are ripe for lancing. The cultivators then come forth in the evening, and with an implement not unlike the knives of a cupping instrument they scarify the capsule on its sides with deep incisions, so that the juice may exude.

In the early morning the cultivators reappear with a scraping knife and their earthenware pots, and they scrape off the exuded juice and collect it in their pots. And this is crude opium.-Blackwood's Magazine.
